FROM THE WORLD CAMEROON

Top court clears path to presidency

Cameroon's top court on Monday declared incumbent Paul Biya, the world's oldest president, the winner of the latest election. Clashes with security forces in Cameroon left at least four protesters dead ahead of the announcement as opposition supporters rallied to demand credible results. Biya has led the central African nation since 1982. The Constitutional Council said he received 53.66 per cent of votes while former ally-turned challenger Issa got 35.19 per cent. The four protesters were shot dead in Douala, the economic capital, on Sunday, while more than 100 were arrested as hundreds of people stormed the streets in several cities.

Pakistan's Punjab police have launched screening of all personnel deployed for the security of provincial CM Maryam Nawaz following threats from Tehreek-e-Labbak Pakistan (TLP), an official said on Monday. Maryam Nawaz, the first woman chief minister of Punjab has also curtailed her public appearance and the security of some senior members of her cabinet too has been beefed up in the face of the threats from the radical party. The steps are taken after a crackdown against the TLP, now a proscribed outfit, when at least 16 people, including members of the TLP and its clashes and supporters of TLP at Muridke, some 60 kms from Lahore.

Amid trade tension, Trump arrives in Japan

ASSOCIATED PRESS n Tokyo

President Donald Trump arrived on Monday in Japan where he met Prime Minister Shinzo Abe. The US leader to ease trade tensions. One key to this strategy might lie in an idea floated by Japan's Government to buy a fleet of Ford F-150 trucks, a meaningful gesture that may also be impractical given the narrow streets in Tokyo and other Japanese cities.

It's an early diplomatic test for Takachi, the first woman to lead Japan. She took office only last week, and has a tenuous coalition backing her. Trump instantly bought into the idea of Ford trucks as he flew to Asia aboard Air Force One. "She has good taste," Trump told reporters. "That's a hot truck."

The two spoke over the phone while Trump was mid-flight on Saturday. Takachi stressed her status as a protégé of the late Prime Minister Shinzo Abe, a favorite of Trump's from his first term, and said she advised him for brokering the Gaza ceasefire that led to the return of hostages held by Hamas. "I thought (Trump) is a very cheerful and fun person," she said.

"He well recognizes me and said he remembers me as a politician whom (former) Prime Minister Abe really cared about," she said. "And I told the president that I extremely look forward to welcoming him in Tokyo." Trump spent Sunday in

Malaysia, where he participated in a regional summit, and departed Monday morning for Japan. While on Air Force One on Monday, he said he planned to talk in Tokyo about the "great friendship" between the US and Japan.

Beneath the hospitality is the search for a strategy to navigate the increasingly complex trade relationship that Trump shook up earlier this year with tariffs. Trump wants allies to buy more American goods and also make financial commitments to build factories and energy infrastructure in the US. The meetings in a Japan come ahead of Trump's sit-down with Chinese leader Xi

Jinping on Thursday in South Korea. Both the US and Japan have sought to limit China's manufacturing ambitions, as the emergence of Chinese electric vehicles, artificial intelligence and advanced computer chips could undermine the American and Japanese economies.

"In light of the planned meeting between Trump and Xi Jinping shortly after, Trump may also be considering how he might strengthen his hand by demonstrating the robustness of the US-Japan relationship," said Kristi Goveia, Japan chair at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, a Washington think tank. Japan's previous administration agreed in September to invest USD 550 billion in the US, which led Trump to trim a threatened 25 per cent tariff on Japanese goods to 15 per cent. But Japan wants the investments to favor Japanese vendors and contractors. Japan's economy and trade minister, Ryosei Akazawa, has said his ministry is compiling a list of projects in computer chips and energy to try to meet the investment target.

"As far as I know, I'm hearing that there are a number of Japanese companies that are showing interest," he told reporters Friday, though he did not give further details. Japanese officials are looking at the possibility of buying more American soybeans, liquefied natural gas and autos.

For Trump, the prospect of Ford trucks in the skyscrapered streets of Tokyo would be a win. The administration has long complained that American vehicles were being shut out of a market that is the home of Toyota, Honda, Nissan, Isuzu, Mitsubishi and Subaru. In a September interview on CNBC, Commerce Secretary Howard Lutnick said Japan wouldn't buy US-branded vehicles because "Chevy's were popular with Japanese gangsters."

Mali is squeezed as militants enforce fuel blockade

ASSOCIATED PRESS n Bamako

The landlocked West African nation of Mali is being squeezed by a blockade on fuel imports imposed by jihadi militants. Education Minister Amadou Sy Savane announced on late Sunday that schools nationwide will be shut for two weeks because the scarcity of fuel makes it difficult for staff to get to work, as is the case with most other workers.

For a country that relies on fuel imports from neighbouring Senegal and the Ivory Coast, the blockade has been a major setback for Mali's military junta. Mali, a country of 25 million people, has battled jihadi militants for several decades, alongside neighbouring Burkina Faso and Niger. Militants from the al-Qaeda-backed Jama'at Nusrat al-Islam wal-Muslimin group announced a ban on fuel imports from neighbouring countries into Mali in early September, after authorities said early this year they were cutting down fuel supplies to remote areas as a measure to squeeze the jihadists in their hideouts.

Hurricane Melissa, at Category 5, slam Jamaica

ASSOCIATED PRESS n Kingston

Hurricane Melissa intensified to Category 5 strength Monday as it neared Jamaica, where forecasters said it would unleash catastrophic flooding, multiple landslides and extensive infrastructure damage. It would be the strongest hurricane to hit the island since record keeping began in 1851.

Melissa, blamed for six deaths in the northern Caribbean as it headed toward the island, was forecast to make landfall on Jamaica on Tuesday and then Cuba later in the day before heading toward the Bahamas, but it was not expected to affect the United States. Hanna McLeod, a 23-year-old hotel receptionist in the Jamaican capital of Kingston, said she will have to work during the hurricane, but that her husband and brother will be at her house, where they boarded the windows and she left candles and flashlights scattered throughout.

"I just told them to keep the door closed," she said. "I am definitely worried. This is actually the first time I'll be experiencing this type of hurricane." McLeod said she bought her favourite canned food, corned beef, but that other members of her family prefer mackerel, "so I got a lot of those."

Category 5 is the highest on the Saffir-Simpson scale with sustained winds exceeding 250 kph. Melissa would be the strongest hurricane in recorded history to directly hit the small Caribbean nation, said Jonathan Porter, chief meteorologist at AccuWeather.

Porter said that critical infrastructure, including Jamaica's main international airport and power plants, are located along the coast in Kingston, where a storm surge of up to 4 metres was expected. "This can become a major setback for Mali's military junta. Mali, a country of 25 million people, has

UN, Israel army clash over drone incident

ASSOCIATED PRESS n Beirut The Israeli army and the United Nations' peacekeeping mission in southern Lebanon (UNIFIL) said peacekeepers shot down an Israeli drone over the weekend but gave conflicting statements about the circumstances.

The incident took place as Israeli strikes over Lebanon intensify amid scrambles to end a tense ceasefire that ended Israel's war with Hezbollah last November, and mounting pressure on the Lebanese Government to disarm the powerful group.

The latest conflict with Hezbollah began the day after the October 7, 2023, Hamas-led attack on Israel, which triggered the war in the Gaza Strip. The militant group Hezbollah, largely based in southern Lebanon, began firing rockets into Israel in support of Hamas and the Palestinians.
